Apt Pupil - Wikipedia

Apt Pupil is the story of Todd Bowden, a brilliant kid that somehow finds out that a Nazi war criminal, Kurt Dussander, lives nearby. But instead of turning him out, Todd decides to feed his own psychopathic tendencies and so he learns from Dussander. Apt Pupil has two of the best characters Stephen King has ever created in my opinion.

Apt Pupil can be a challenging and interesting movie, but only if you give it a chance. I've read some reviews here and elsewhere that complained about a lack of seriousness and gravitas in terms of dealing with what is emotionally charged subject matter (Nazism and the Holocaust) and although I can see why some people might feel that way, I think they are missing an important point.

The story, "Apt Pupil," was the most disturbing and it made me think about what makes a person evil. You can also see how normal kid can easily be changed into an evil mind or cold blood killer because of stories that he wasn't supposed to know before he was old enough to understand them.

Apt Pupil Trailer - YouTube

"Apt Pupil" uses the horrors of the Holocaust as an atmospheric backdrop to the more conventional horror devices of a Stephen King story. It's not a pretty sight. By the end of the film, as a death camp survivor is quoting John Donne's poem about how no man is an island, we're wondering what island the filmmakers were inhabiting, as they assembled this uneasy hybrid of the sacred and the profane.
